PROPERTY SUMMARY

A recent thinning provides an extensive trail system through a beautiful rolling tract, just right for building a home and enjoying the woods. The property rises from the road, looking over the surrounding hills and facing east for a spectacular sunrise view. To the west of the property is an undeveloped expansive tract of mature hardwoods. Houston County is one of the smallest in the state and prides itself as "A bit of Ireland in Tennessee". The county seat Erin was named by Irish immigrants who were reminded of their homeland's countryside. Erin is five miles north, and the town of Waverly is fifteen miles to the south.
